Air Cadets Go To Lethbridge

There were no absentees among the Didsbury Squadron of Air Cadets, when they left for camp at the Lethbridge Airtraining School on Tuesday evening. The squadron was at full strength, thirty boys in all, and was in charge of Flt.-Sgt. Clarence Johnson.

This is the first camp for the cadets, and there was no little excitement at the station when they entrained, but all are prepared for a strenuous ten days of training.

Their first duty was in the dining car where dinner was already prepared, and the boys thought it was an excellent start.

On the same train were cadet squadrons from Camrose, Wetaskiwin, Ponoka and Olds, and they were later joined by boys from Carstairs and Crossfield.

Obituary.

CUMMIN F. RENNIE

The funeral of Cummin F. Rennie, who died on Tuesday, July 13, was held at the Evangelical Church on Friday afternoon, with the interment at Didsbury cemetery.

Mr. Rennie, who was 87 years of age, was born at New Hamburg, Ont., and was married at the same place to Miss Anna Christen, of 1883. They farmed in Ontario until 1902, when they moved to Alberta.

Settling at Didsbury, they homesteaded seven miles south-west of town, where they lived until they retired in 1931, when they moved to Didsbury.

Mr. Rennie predeceased her husband. She was one of the earliest members of the Evangelical Church, of which he was a staunch supporter.

He was also one of the oldest members of the Didsbury Agricultural Societies, and was a director from the earlier years up to the time of his death.

He took a great interest in school affairs, being one of the first trustees of the Clovermont School District and was secretary from the formation of the district until it was taken over by the larger division. He was also connected with the U.F.A. and U.G.G. since their formation.

He is survived by two sons, Percy and Wilfred, of Didsbury, and two daughters, Mrs. John Carlson, of Glendale California, and Alice, also of Glendale.

Palbearers were: Walter Scheidt, Hy. Roeth, J. V. Berscht, Amos Weber, Ivan Weber and Ira Leva-good.

Pete Stakenas returned Sunday from a month's visit to Chicago.

Grandmothers' Day at Mountain View

Grandmothers were honored at the meeting of the Mountain View W.I., held at Mrs. Ed. Blain's residence on Tuesday.

Eight grandmothers were present and they were entertained by a short program given by granddaughters.

Mrs. Fulkert was the oldest grandmother present, and Mrs. Pearson was the grandmother with the most grandchildren. A very enjoyable afternoon was spent.

Lone Pine Notes

July meeting of the Lone Pine W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Emily Hunter on Thursday of last week with nine members and ten visitors present. Mrs. Otto Faas was elected as delegate to the Farm Women's Rest Week at Olds. Contest put on by the hostess was won by Mrs. Elmer Bottiger, with Mrs. Ted Bolton second and Miss Vivian Albertin third.

The July War Savings Certificate was won by Mrs. Marie Coster, as was also the 10c draw. $5.00 was donated to the Junior Red Cross for crippled children, and $5.00 to the Salvation Army. The annual W.I. picnic and dance cleared $45.00. August meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Sam Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Welch and Mrs. Fred Thompson spent the weekend at the latter's old home here, returning to Calgary Sunday evening. Mrs. Welch and little daughter, Gerlie, are spending a couple of weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Allie Thompson.

Mrs. Ted Boulton (nee Helen Prose) and family, have been spending their vacation with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Prose.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Fricke, (nee Alma Faas) and two children, of Fruitvale, B.C., and Mrs. Mary Faas of Hinton, Sask., have been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Otto Faas.

Mrs. Otto Faas, Mrs. Emily Richardson, Mrs. Ruth Eckel and Mrs. Ed Stiles are vacationing at the Olds Agricultural School this week.

Mrs. Clifford Nelson and daughter, June, who have been visiting the former's father, Mr. Hugh McLean, have returned to their home in Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schumaker spent Thursday in Calgary, attending the funeral of their sister-in-law, Mrs. Fred Schumaker.

Ideal Weather for Didsbury Fair.

Ideal weather favored the Didsbury Fair which was held Wednesday and the number of fine stock exhibited again justified the reputation of its being one of the best livestock exhibits in any fair in the province.

The exhibits of the Didsbury Dairy Calf Club, which held its fair and judging competition in connection, added greatly to the exhibit. The noticeable improvement in the quality of the Calf Club exhibits indicated the value of the work done by the club and is a credit to the young members and their leaders.

The entries of horses numbered 115, cattle 123, and sheep and swine swine 26. There was also a creditable exhibit of poultry and agricultural products.

The rationing of sugar interfered with the exhibits in domestic science and the number of entries was not quite up to par, although it was a very creditable showing.

A feature of the inside exhibits was a showing of model aeroplanes made by the pupils of the Didsbury Schools. These models are made to exact scale and are used in aeroplane recognition instructions by the airforce.

Along with the exhibition was a beautiful model aeroplane built by Bill Ross, of the Adhead Garage. This model plane is equipped with a small gasoline motor and will actually fly under its own power. It is a real credit to its builder.

In the sports there was a splendid program of children's races and every event was well filled with entries.

The results of the horse races were as follows:

Didsbury Jottings

By A.C.H.

The Air Cadets, all shined and neatly pressed, with happy smiles, boarded the five o'clock train on Tuesday. They are off for ten days to the Bombing and Gunnery School at Lethbridge.

We hope they take their box of Lux along. Preparation simply means socks and undies. And if we know anything about weather, and Flight Sergeants, they will do plenty of prepping.

A box of cherries must taste nice this weather. We wouldn't know but when, and if they come down to two bits a box, we will try them out. Meanwhile, we are still tenderly watching our strawberry patch. The four berries we watched turn from a sour green to pale pink, fooled us, too. The morning we set out with our mouth all set, we found the robbers had been there first. Oh well, we can always chew on a dried apricot.

Every once in a while we go to sleep on the job. The night that Scoutmaster Donald Mortimer presented the Thanks Scout Badge to Mr. W. A. Austin, he also invested two boys as Scouts. They were Walter Scheidt and Ernie Clarke, jr. We understand the boys looked all over the Pioneer for mention of this, and were disappointed. We are sorry, boys. But, better late than never.

Attend Junior Club Week

Robert Hughes for the Didsbury West Beef Calf Club, and Jeanette Worrall for the Didsbury Dairy Calf Club, were delegates to attend the "Junior Club Week" for efficiency winners of the Alberta Junior Stock and Crop Clubs which was held at the Provincial School of Agriculture Olds, during the week of July 5th.

One hundred and forty seven club members, of which 28 are girls, were in attendance.

Wide Diversity Of Peoples Comprising The Population Of The Far-Flung British Empire

(By Colonel Walter Elliot, formerly Secretary for Agriculture in the British Government, in the BBC Press Service)

DID you ever stop to think that both the Goddess Venus and the Prophet Moses, if they were alive today, would be inhabitants of the British Colonial Empire, and going about on British passports? It is only another way of saying that both the Island of Cyprus, which was the birthplace of Venus, and Trans-Jordan by Palestine, the burial-place of the Prophet Moses, are in that widely spread system of the British Empire.

That is one corner, and only one, of the Colonial Empire. The Dominions are the Dominions, and their history is a matter of daily knowledge. The colonies are a different grouping, with different problems altogether. Far less is known about them, either in Britain or in the rest of the world. Why is this?

In the first place, because of their tremendous diversity, both in size, in location, and in civilization. There is no setting in which you can bring them all together. Gibraltar is a colony, a fortress and nothing more; Jebel-al Turk—it's name means the Hill of the Black Turk—the Moors from North Africa who gave the Rock its name when he landed there, so many centuries ago, to overthrow the Christian kingdoms and begin the Saracen conquest of Spain. Nigeria in West Africa is a colony, seven times as large as England, with a population of 20,000,000 souls.

The five territories of East Africa are colonies, covering 1,000,000 square miles from the Indian Ocean to the high central plateau—"White Man's country," as Theodore Roosevelt called it—the backbone of Africa. They muster more than 12,000,000 inhabitants. They could hold 50,000,000. It is a far cry from there to the Bahamas and Bermuda. Or again to the Falklands, off South America; with 2,000 people and 600,000 sheep—or farther south still, the Antarctic island of South Georgia—glaciers, rocks, and snows—a touching point for the South Atlantic whalers.

The differences in civilization are even more striking. I have spoken of Palestine, where you may walk across from an Arab market-place and hear a symphony orchestra—refugees—no, settlers, from France or Berlin, playing the most beautiful and intricate of modern music. Again you know the happy peaceful, old-established islanders of the Caribbean—to which Americans have recently come, as neighbors, to strengthen the United Nations' defence with their sailors and their marines. But in the African lands, no great distance eastwards along the Equator, nature is raw and crude, and the memories of torture, slave-trading, and endless wars are things of yesterday.

It is not till you have travelled in a land like West Africa and seen the change from massacre to peace, that you realize what a boon law and order can be to a country. It is easy enough to laugh at the white man in the tropics, particularly the Britisher, and his passion for clean clothes and for games.

But the fifth hole of the golf course at Benin is on the site of the old tree of Sacrifice there, and when the troops marched in, there were bodies on that tree in every stage of decomposition; and things had been done to them that made the hardened soldiers turn their heads away. Men who had been there told me; still active, unflinching, men.

All that rich tropical region is swarming with the jet black negroes of the forests and the rains, the cheerful, humorous, gleaming West Africans, with a gift for gorgeous color in dress unequalled anywhere in the world, and the raw material of jazz music peeping out of their eyes. They differ more than words can say from the white-robed, dignified, East African, whose features show the long connection with Arabs and Arab blood, and whose phrases and hearing link them across the seas with India, even with China—the whole range of the East. There is nothing Eastern about West Africa. It is one of the reliefs of life to find a place where there is an almost conscious touch of circus in all pomp and grandeur, and where the potentates have such tremendous and obvious titles as the Akale of Abeokuta—or the Owo of Awa. The blameless clerks of Whitehall have to cope with both East and West and North and South, and go home to sleep at night in Subitron or Upper Tooting.

All this is administered by men on the spot sent out for the job—a Governor. In the small colonies he rules directly with a committee of officials.

In the three P's—Bermuda, Bahama, Barbados, the local inhabitants have legislatures and majorities over the officials and can and will hold stubbornly to their views in spite of all the central authority can do. In the large colonies he works both through deputy administrators and through the local kingdoms and chiefs. The kings and chiefs raise their own revenues and run, some times to a very large extent, their own affairs. We are feeling our way towards the best association of world affairs and local administration. Nobody pretends we've got it right, yet.

Except in the Mediterranean, the Governor had a handful of troops, locally raised; a few white officers; white regiments. The West African Frontier Force, and the King's African Rifles, for instance, five battalions in all, were all that guarded against both internal disorder and external aggression, the whole group of the West African colonies—with 11 frontiers, all paper, and 20 to 30 millions of a population. And the whole French African army on the other side of a piece of string.

These countries are open for trade with the whole world and their trade was steadily growing. In fact, one aspect alone was opening up: more and more, and at a multiplying rate. This was the automobile—not so much private car as the autobus. The herald of progress was the primitive truck; with benches, perhaps a hood; and men and women, bags, bundles, weapons, babies, more bundles, more bags, yells, squeals, red dust, exhaust, bangs and gasoline splashes. The black man prospered—because the bus brings the road and the road brings the traffic; and all this belongs to the country itself, and the country folk, as the railway train never can. The machine can be the servant of man and not his master.

The story is not all good; and there have been mistakes in development in the Colonial Empire, just as elsewhere. One of those dangers lies certainly in pushing to extremes the desire not to interfere with native ways of life—the philosophy of native kings—"indirect rule".

Above all, it has been preached during the last 50 years that the worst of crimes was "militarism", a policy of "arming the natives". In the Far East this ended by leaving a peaceful and rapidly improving society quite inadequately defended against the armored fanatic State which was coming into existence in modern Japan.

No doubt we spent too little on guns and too much on butter, to paraphrase Goethe's famous phrase; but we hope we shall not make that mistake again.

All these achievements were carried out, in the midst of a thousand other pre-occupations, by the unwearied islanders of Great Britain. We think that the fortresses we built—Gibraltar, Malta—have been useful to the cause of freedom; that the hands we have developed—West Africa, East Africa—have some lessons in government, in the interworking of black and white, that may be of interest to the world; that the City of Refuge we helped to make, in Palestine, has saved some 400,000-500,000 souls, not enough, for hell.

We are conscious enough of where

We have gone wrong; and have had it driven home to us, in Singapore and Malaya. But, by and large, we say the work is a feat that any nation might be proud of. And the development which has brought it so far, since 1600, is not nearly exhausted yet; and that, too, we bring forward when we come to the table of the United Nations.

Belgians Have Established A Fishing Post On British Coast And Give Scientific Training

IN May, 1940, Belgian fishermen "invaded" and subsequently "annexed" a small fishing post on England's Channel coast; the English inhabitants of the tiny port say they "adapted" the Belgians for the duration. The Belgian fisher folk came, anyway, in scores of craft and brought their wives and families with them. It took a little time to settle the "invaders" and find them suitable accommodation but the Belgians, with sturdy independence and a super-abundance of self-help, turned every clack into an opportunity and soon formed themselves into a self-contained and friendly colony on British soil.

Tradition has it that Belgian fishermen are among the finest in the old world. In Ostend, head port of the Belgian peacetime fisheries, there was a School for Fishermen, where boys from thirteen to fifteen years of age were taught fishing scientifically, and at sixteen were required to pass a fairly exhaustive examination before passing out and being allowed to become a member of a fishing craft. When the Belgian fishermen were forced to leave their country they had time to collect their School with its valuable instruments, charts and general teaching apparatus.

But the School staff managed to escape and the next thing was to try and recreate the Belgian School for Fishermen on British soil.

The Belgian Government in London gave its practical blessing to the plan for re-establishing the School and the Principal, M.C. De Beken, assisted by a staff of six professors and instructors, was given facilities to rebuild the work of the School. Premises were found on two top floors of an old stonehouse facing the fish market, and the staff got to work re-equipping the School.

While the Admiralty and the Board of Trade helped with some equipment, most of it was improvised by the principal and his staff, working night and day for weeks creating instruments, charts, nets, scientific apparatus, and even making the benches and desks at which the new generation would have to work. Local folk also lent a hand, supplying wool, bits of metal, parts of old nautical instruments, rope, old nets, indeed, anything to help their "invaders" to start up again.

The aim of the school is two-fold: the education of boys from the age of thirteen to become efficient members of the crew of fishing vessels; and special courses of training for the more ambitious boys who wish to take the official examination for Mate or Extra-Master in fishing ships, or as an Engineer for motor machinery up to 500 h.p.

There are five departments of study: navigation, including seamanship, meteorology, nautical instruments, maritime law, signalling and rules of sea road; and students pass tests in the use of sextants, chronometer, compasses, mirrors, sounding devices and chart reading. General branches deal with mathematics, Flemish, English, French geography, history and hygiene, which includes first aid at sea. Engineering includes the construction, parts, and working of any type of marine motor up to 500 h.p., knots, splices and rigging; net making and repairing. In all five sections discussion is bilingual—in Flemish and English.

One of the most fascinating departments of the school is the section containing models of every type of buoy in all parts of the world and shore storm signals of various countries, also a series of 21 ship models which are placed out on a chart showing a large stretch of sea, not only for navigation, but what is most important in congested areas, the rule of the sea road.

VITAMINS ARE IMPORTANT
PART OF DIET TODAY

Right Foods Important

Today everyone has become vitamin-conscious. They realize that fitness depends upon the food they eat for the body and the more fit we are the more successful we are. Especially is this true in wartime. It's the nations that will win the war. In times of distress they will be able to stand more. As a member of the United Nations it is essential that you should eat right.

Don't think you can get your vitamins entirely from capsules and then go ahead and eat unbalanced meals. This is wrong. The proper foods with high vitamin content are important. So when doing your market shopping, be sure to buy the correct vegetables and fruits.

Our 32-page booklet tells you how to get the maximum vitamin values from the food you eat every day. It will answer all your questions about vitamins and will describe which vitamins are in certain foods. You may wonder what vitamins are, what they can do, and especially what is the meaning of vitamin deficiencies for them. After reading our booklet, you'll no longer wonder.

Foods that are rich in vitamins are not necessarily more expensive than those low in vitamins.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Vitamins to Keep You Fit" to Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermott Avenue E., Winnipeg, Man. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

The World of Wheat

by H. G. L. Strange

— Harvest Help for Farmers —

I have just returned from a long trip to the various provinces of Eastern Canada, looking among other things, into the needs of Eastern farmers for prairie grains.

The late spring and the heavy rains delayed seedings in the Eastern provinces; indeed considerable acreage has not been seeded at all. There will, therefore, be heavy demands this coming fall and winter for western grains, particularly for oats and barley.

It would be a patriotic duty for the West to try to harvest every single acre sown to crops, to save every single bushel of grain. But labour is now very short, both in the East and in the West. It would be of invaluable help to our farmers, and to the war effort of Canada and the United States, therefore, if the residents of towns, villages and hamlets in the prairie provinces would take some time off this coming harvest season and make their services available to our prairie farmers to help to gather in safely, this most important coming crop. This would enable our Eastern farmers to produce more precious bacon and other food products that could be shipped to Britain and to the Armed Forces Overseas, which products are certainly badly needed for the coming important military operations.

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN THE WORLD OF FOODSTUFFS

Recent hot weather has led to crop deterioration in Western Saskatchewan and south-western Alberta where moisture supplies are deficient—Russia has taken 7,500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat in the past year—U.S. Winter Wheat production was forecast on July 1st at 519,180,000 bushels, as compared with 703,253,000 last year.

Winter wheat prospects in the United Kingdom continue very satisfactory—The Japanese Ministry of Agriculture has announced that 1942 rice production amounts to approximately 335 million bushels, an increase of 21% over 1941 production—The Argentine exportable wheat surplus was recently estimated at 251,005,000 bushels as compared with 191,377,000 bushels a year ago.

C.P.R. Saves Rubber With New Machine

SHOWN above, with the safety guard removed from the knife for this picture only, to illustrate the operation of the cutter, is a new machine developed at the Canadian Pacific Railway's Angus Shops in Montreal as part of a programme for reclaiming rubber, latest phase of the company's Dominion-wide conservation campaign. The machine prepares worn and burst sections of rubber hose from air and signal connections to be put back into service. The good sections of the used hose are applied with the aid of a small malleable strip adapter and the reclaimed product meets all safety requirements. In the short time the programme has been in effect five and one-half tons of rubber have been saved with 5,394 air hose and 1,058 signal hose reclaimed to make up that total, according to H. B. Bowen, chief of motive power and rolling stock, who is in charge of the rubber-saving plan. Over the year it is estimated there will be a saving of 30 per cent. in the rubber hose used on the 84,139 pieces of company rolling stock — with locomotives, passenger equipment, freight and work cars included in that total.

Rebecca Activities

On Wednesday, July 14th, the Zella Rebecca Red Cross group met at the home of Mrs. Jack Rindal with ten ladies present.

A very lovely quilt was put together during the course of the afternoon.
A bouquet of flowers was sent to one of our members, Mrs. Ada Eggins, who has had an operation at the Didsbury hospital. We wish her a speedy recovery.

The penny fund was counted and totalled $7.09. This is to be used in purchasing articles for boxes overseas to our local boys. These boxes will be packed at the next meeting which will be held on Wednesday, August 25, at the home of Mrs. Arthur Waldford.

A most pleasant afternoon was climaxed by a dairy lunch served by the hostess, Mrs. Rindal.

With the opening of the "Battle for Europe," the task of the Royal Navy is staggering. It is a pleasant fact that today, despite casualties, it has more ships than it had when the war began, thanks to the tremendous speed-up of Britain's shipyard, which built 900 warships during the first three-and-a-half years of the war.

Written specially for the weekly newspapers of Canada

By JIM GREENBLAT

This introduces, from the nation's capital, a new series of weekly letters designed exclusively for community papers of Canada, and that vast audience of readers which never gets out to a night club. For the rancher, farmer, fruit grower, miner, the semi-urban and rural whose feet are directly and indirectly rooted in the soil of Canada.

Your own editor, among others, has been annoyed to high heaven with the flood of material which comes from Ottawa, much of which he cannot use. Like you, he's a busy person running that old paper you think so much of, whether you agree with him on politics or not. He knows you would be interested in a quick catch-up on governmental doings and what's what around Ottawa, after you come in from shores at night. He also knows you do not relish long-winded reading after a hard day's work. And this weekly feature, for your editor's sake and especially you, I hope will fill the bill.

That seems to be our "simple task" in this weekly news letter. You must not expect miracles of reporting. Time, experience in digging out the essential facts and developing a continuity of understanding of what you might be interested in out here, will follow. Undoubtedly you want facts, and an authentic, unbiased and interpretive slant at Ottawa, dished out as if your own worried-looking editor was here doing it.

Night of July 9th. While Brooke Claxton, parliamentary assistant addressed a sparse and somnolent House on External Affairs, I had the feeling somehow that momentous things were in the making. The Prime Minister and Defence Minister Ralston, only two cabinet members present, were close in huddle in adjoining front benches. The P. M. looked grave and pre-occupied. He was making a pencilled draft. Correcting, leaning over to check with Mr. Ralston, pencilling some more. At 8 o'clock next morning I heard his radio announcement to the nation that Canadians were fighting on the beach heads of Sicily. He may have been drafting that important speech as I watched, even while all of Canada was unaware of history-making events taking shape thousands of miles away. Surely they knew. What a secret to carry!

No. seven league raised more fuss than sugar for canning. Housewives were definitely annoyed at the arbitrary allotment after counting cans in the basement. The Opposition started a warm but informs two debates in the House on this matter and Finance Minister Llewellyn said knowledge of available supplies was not known at the time. It was estimated 30 to 40 percent of the population did their own canning. Lo and behold, actually 84% applied. Now, in Germany and the U.S.A., a fat allocation is made to each ration book holder, whether for canning or not. Canadians asked for 200 million pounds; only half that amount available. Certainly there will be a different approach to the problem next year.

Probably more C.W.A.C.'s, etc., in Ottawa than any other single place. My observation here is that Canada can be proud of them. From what I've seen in the nation's capital their bearing, conduct and deportment on the whole is excellent. It could be that some civilian women do not set the same standard.

Who'd ever thought it! Research experts of the Department of Agriculture, although mum on the subject yet, are working on the production of rubber, resins and a superior kapok from species of the forty milk weed. A group have returned here from the U.S.A., where they conferred with experts on progress made there along the same line. It appears it's getting into the post-experimental stage, because I hear they are even working on harvesting methods and machinery to make the once-pest get to work for the war effort.

Directed toward greater efficiency in manpower allocation it is announced here that a representative of National Selective Service will be located at army reception centres to interview rejected applicants for enlistment. If sympathetically handled, in my opinion, this should help to put more round pegs in round holes of the agricultural and industrial war effort.

The Price Board has granted an increase of 2-3 of a cent a dozen on clothes pins. Doesn't seem much, but what does it mean to the Canadian housewives? They use annually around one million 320 thousand gross, or over 190 million pins to hang out the wash.

THIS year the Canadian Farmer urgently needs help. He needs your help to produce the food so necessary for victory. Many thousands of farm workers are serving in the Forces, so that the farmer — the Soldier of the Soil — is short-handed, but short-handed as he is, he is called upon to produce more food than ever before. Food is one of the most powerful weapons of war. Grains, bacon, dairy products, eggs, beef, fruit, vegetables — FOOD to feed our armies, our allies and our people we must have.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

You may be a school teacher, student, business or professional man, an office or store clerk — no matter what you are, if you have a few hours, days, weeks, or months of free time this summer, you can do your country and the farmer a great and patriotic service by helping out on the farm. You may be inexperienced, but you still can help. You will find work on the farm healthy and congenial. It will give you the satisfaction of feeling that you have brought Victory nearer.

What you should do NOW!

HOME ACCIDENTS

Accidents at home can be prevented with a little foresight. Dark stairs should be finished in light shades. Cellar stairs particularly should be painted with an edge of white to increase their safety.

The largest single unit freight shipment ever carried over the Canadian National Railways, and exceeding any known previous record established by lines on this continent, is now on the System double track main line traveling from Lachine to the Government synthetic rubber plant at Sarnia, Ontario, moving on a five-day schedule for a distance which fast freights traverse in the hours from noon midnight to just past noon. Manufactured by the Dominion Bridge Company, known as a "B.R. Extractor", is a war job for a synthetic rubber plant. It weighs 150 tons, is more than 105 feet long, 12½ feet wide and 16½ feet above the top of the track rail. At the company's Lachine plant this record load was placed on three flat cars, being cradled in special beds on the end cars, the middle one being an "idler". It was a big job in loading and after that the Canadian National engineering and operating forces had to deal with problems of pany, this huge tank, technically getting the load on to the main line. Because of its length and projections the tank is being moved only during daylight and then at a restricted speed of 15 miles an hour. At curves extra precaution must be taken so that the front end will not sheer off switch targets or signal posts. The special train making this movement carries a squad of seven Canadian National men who are physically and mechanically prepared to deal with any problem which may develop while on route.

Receives Patent

Plastic Glo-Sign Has Been Invented By Regina Man

Patent for a plastic glo-sign which could be substituted for motor license plates, street and highway signs, and any other kind of metal signs, has been granted by Ottawa, according to word received recently by its inventor, Dr. A. O. Store, of Regina, Sask.

"The plastic glo-sign is indestructible," Dr. Store said. "It will glow in absolute darkness without any light reflected on it."

The sign is of one solid piece, he pointed out. The body of it can be of any color. The lettering is transparent.

"The plastic used would be satisfactory for any kind of a self-illuminating sign," Dr. Store said. "The material for it is easy to obtain."

A Close Call

Depth Charge Bips, Late Freighter In Grapple With Sub

Attacked in the night by an enemy submarine scouting a convoy in the Atlantic, crewmen of an Ontario lake freighter told how the blast of an exploding depth charge tore off their propeller and left them adrift until taken in tow by another naval ship.

Her hull rusted and barnacle-covered from months on the North Atlantic trade routes, the dumpy little lake freighter presented little of her post-war appearance as she shunted up to a Canadian dock for the first time in many a moon.

"She's a mighty lucky tub," one of the crewmen remarked. "It's pretty hard to remember how many times the Germans have tried to get her with torpedoes; she's watched a lot of other ships go down, but so far all she's lost is her propeller."

"With the first warning the gunners ripped off the gun cover, loaded her up and waited—but not for long. We fired on the first things that sounded like a submarine—and kept right on firing. We don't know yet whether we got anything or not but if we didn't we must have come awfully close."

The men said the next thing they heard was the burst of the escort ship's depth charges and some of them almost lifted the lake's stern out of the water.

Tragedy Of War

Thousands Of Children Have Never Known Any Other Atmosphere

It is sad to think that there are children now past babyhood who have never known anything but a war atmosphere.

A child of eight, for example, may remember vaguely the time before the war, but between the ages of 4½ and 8 years he or she has grown to accept war restrictions and innovations as permanent facts.

In this connection I heard the other day what I was assured was a true story. A father was trying to describe sunrise and sunset to his little girl, how it took place, and why. "Oh," she said, "you mean it's been going up and coming down every day always—just like the barrage balloons!"—Belfast News-Letter.

Pattern For Disaster

BY J. B. RYAN

CHAPTER X.

"NO, ESTEBAN," cried Rosita. "If they have caught Pancho, they will be watching for us. Do not go."

"We must have food," said Esteban. "We have had nothing to eat or drink for over 24 hours." He put the sister's hand. "Do not worry, Rosita. I promise you that I will find food for us."

shall return. The darkness will cover my movements; the day is done and the neighborhood will not be as congested as it was when Pancho sallied out."

"Let me go, Esteban," said Morgan. "Your place is here with your sister. If there is danger without, I should be the one to face it."

"Let us not be unreasonable about this," smiled Esteban. "Let us be practical instead of heroic. There are two things to be done—obtain food and protect Rosita. My qualifications for the one job outweigh yours, so you must assume the other duty which, I trust, you will perform as well as I would."

Rosita's eyes widened and she glanced quickly at Morgan. He pretended not to be conscious of her gaze as he answered Esteban. "You are right, I suppose," he admitted. "But—since we shall be safe here, you must take this. And he held out the automatic pistol taken from Verde."

Once more Esteban moved his head in negation. "Keep the gun, senior. If the police do trap me, it is better that I have no weapon with which to shoot one of them and make the case against me even worse."

"They saw him to the door and watched him slip into the darkening street. 'Esteban will be all right,' said Morgan, as he led the silent girl back to the hiding-place among the great bales. 'And when he returns and we have eaten the food we need, we shall feel more like tackling the problem of doing something for Pancho.'

"What can we do?" she asked dispiritedly. "We cannot, of course, break into the jail to free him; if we surrender, we would not be helping him. If we leave Buenos Aires, we will be abandoning him to his fate."

MORGAN fingered his chin thoughtfully. "I have gotten you into quite a mess, haven't I, seniorita? If I had never come to Argentina, this would not have happened."

"Please do not misunderstand me, senior," Rosita placed her hand on the man's arm to emphasize her earnestness. "It is not that I blame you."

She checked herself, the fingers tightening about Morgan's arm, and her head turned quickly. Out of the dark behind her had sounded a squeak of rusty hinges and then the creaking of the door.

"Quiet, Rosita!" Morgan whispered, drawing her back into their rude shelter. "That is not Esteban!"

Another speaker answered the complaint with a short laugh. "We have our orders from Captain Rojas to go through every wool warehouse along the waterfront. Remember, there were strands of loose wool clinging to the clothes of that war-faced Pancho as though he had been hiding in just such a place as this." The wool-strewn floor deadened the footsteps of the police as the men spread away from the door. Morgan caught the hand of Rosita, stole around the dislodged bale and tipped through an aisle of piled wool toward the darker recesses of the warehouse's rear.

The muffled thud of an overturned bale echoed hollowly through the storeroom. Morgan and the girl came to the end of the passage. A shadow figure loomed against the square of window on the wall ahead and the American flattened himself against the bales. The policeman turned toward the aisle; the bulked wool yielded slightly behind one of Morgan's shoulders and Morgan was quick to squirm himself into the opening caused by two bales being stacked a few inches apart.

He pulled Rosita in after him. The place was a tight fit. The bales pressed tightly against their backs and chests, but the aperture was an ideal sanctuary. The wool, fluffing out after Rosita had squeezed through, practically closed the opening, like foliage over a cave mouth.

"The man in the aisle came nearer. Morgan could hear the soft pat of his hand against the walls of bales on either side of him. Rosita, as if fearful that the pawing hand would grapple between the bales and take her, shrang closer against Morgan."

Suddenly, from across the warehouse came a shout. "Amigos, we have one of them!"

The warehouse door banged shut; the man in the corridor behind Morgan and Rosita halted, then raced toward the scene of disturbance. A scuffle was in progress at the door, and from all parts of the building, men scrambled to assist the two guards.

The label of voices died down to allow one speaker to be heard. "Well, you rascal, where are your companions?"

"I do not know what you are talking about," replied Esteban sullenly. "I am alone. Why have you jumped on me like this?"

The man who was questioning Esteban laughed jeeringly. "You are alone?" he scoffed. "Then what are you doing with all that bread and wine? You have enough there to feed a dozen people."

Rosita stirred. "Senior Morgan, you have a gun. Can't we—can't we help Esteban?"

"They are too many for us," he counseled reluctantly. "And the pistol is useless. Esteban himself would not want us to fire on the police."

The other two must be in this warehouse. The leader of the police squad was giving orders. "Take this man outside to Captain Rojas. I want this place searched thoroughly by the rest of you."

"But we have already poked into every nook and cranny of this place. Nevertheless, we shall go through it once more, overlooking not an inch of space. Start from the side and work toward the rear, moving every bale out of the way as you go along. We'll find them if it takes all night."

"The warehouse," he whispered. "While they are busy in front we can crawl through the window and slip away."

"But—Esteban—"

"They have taken him away already. It is up to us to free him, and Tio Pancho. We are their only hope."

Reluctantly she yielded to the pressure of his hand and sidled out from between the bales. But when Morgan stepped out into aisle, it was the girl's hand that gripped warningly. Already one of the policemen had circled the bales and was on watch at the window.

The path between the bales was dark, but only dark enough for Morgan and Rosita to be unseen as long as they remained perfectly still. Morgan's lips brushed against the girl's ear. "Remain here," he murmured. "Perhaps I can get that fellow out of the way."

He stepped away before she could protest, walking toward the window without any effort to render himself inconspicuous. The guard, however, coming, but Morgan's attitude was so like that of one of his companions that the American was allowed to reach the window without being questioned.

"Have you seen any sign of them?" Morgan asked.

"No," the guard began, then his attention caught by the strange voice or by some oddity of Morgan's dress or appearance, his head bent for a better look at Morgan's face.

Morgan let him thus, catching the man on the side of the skull with the flat of the automatic cupped in his hand. He caught the slumping figure and when he had stretched the senseless man on the floor Rosita had followed him.

Morgan lifted the girl, assisted her through the window, then crawled out himself to join her below. She followed him as he crept along the side of the building; they had just quitted. At the corner of the warehouse, Morgan crouched in the edge of shadow. The automobiles were just ahead, and a large number of men were gathered near them. The girl and the man were close enough to recognize two of the figures in the crowd—Captain Rojas and Esteban Velasquez.

ROJAS was listening to an account of the capture of Esteban, obviously pleased with what he heard.

THEIR BATTLE CHANT

Cpl. Robert Dunn, Westville, N.J., writes from Africa that negro artillerymen provided a battle cry for Americans on one sector in the Tunisian campaign. With each fire order the boys kissed the projectile as it went on its way and chanted in rhythm, "Rommel, count 'ya men." With each subsequent fire order they sang out, "Rommel, count 'ya men again."

OVERYOU GO, POP!

FLAT ON HIS BACK! William Ophtham and William, Jr., show how it's done. Jiu Jitsu style. Mighty handy thing to know. Handy to know a bowl of Kellogg's Corn Flakes tastes wonderful anytime. Too. "Gives me real rest for breakfast," says father. "We eat them at our house all hours," says son. By independent survey, Kellogg's Corn Flakes are the favorite in a majority of Canadian homes. Ready to eat in 40 seconds. They leave no pots and pans to wash. Economical, too. Get some tomorrow. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.
